QUESTION UP TO AHEARN. TOO

Committee Waits on Borough President To-Day and Asks for Explanation.

WANT HIM TO WAKE UP

Wish to Know Why the Appropriation for Signs Is Not Used.

Whether New York's streets are to be labelled properly and the signs now in place maintained and kept lighted, or whether the slipshod conditions which obtain are to continue, will be brought to an issue to-day with the borough administration. A committee represent-ing the Street Name Sign Conference, which is composed of the West Side As-sociation, the City Club and the Merchants' Association, is to call upon Borough President Ahearn in the City Hall. This committee, headed by J. L. Brower, of the West Side Association, has a number of "whys" to propound to Mr. Ahearn, most pertinent of all being the one concerning the appropria-tion of $30,000 which was granted to him nearly a year ago for a street sign system. It is expected by the committee that Mr. Ahearn will explain why he has permitted that money to lie idle while the city's street signs have gone

Many Complaints Made.

The meeting between Ahearn and the conference committee is the result of a request made yesterday by Mr. Brower. Behind the request were the com-plaints of citizens for a year back and it would seem that the time had come for those in charge of the government of the municipality to awake to the fact that New York is not a third-rate village; that she ought to have a street sign system of the highest utility and in keeping with her dignity as a me-

J.L. Brower.

Former Borough President Jacob A Cantor, in whose administration the first modern street signs were established, said to-day that if he had had another year in office he would have given the city a system of signs that would have set a standard for the world. He declared that he had done as much as he could with the appropriations that he had been able to obtain from the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, and altogether between 1902 and the end of his term purchased and put in place throughout the city approximately 9,000 signs.

"I don't know how much it cost to maintain the illuminated signs on the old lampposts," said Mr. Cantor today; "and I didn't care when I was in office. The citizens of New York want street signs, and they should have the effice. The citizens of New York want street signs, and they should have the best, not a system that is forever in disgrace. Now, it is said, that the gas supply has been cut off the lampost signs because of the great extravagance. The borough administration has nothing to do with the cost of lighting. The money for that is controlled by the Department of Water, Gas and Electricity, but I never could understand why a city that spends millions a year to light her streets cannot spend a few thousands to illuminate her street signs for the convenience and protection of her citizens. I think it is a disgrace that things should continue as they are.

Had a Complaint Bureau.

Had a Complaint Bureau.

Had a Complaint Bureau.

"After I got the labelling of the streets started I organized a bureau in the Borough President's office to take care of all complaints. Relations were established with the Police Department and the Department of Street Cleaning, and deally reports would be received from policemen or white wings that a sign was broken or that it had not been illuminated the night before. These reports were taken up immediately, repairs were made, and when I went out of office that system was working smoothly and rendering a service that recommended its continuance. "It was imposs, ble to adopt a one-design sign when I took hold of the question, and it is now. In the uptown parts of the city there is the Welsbach system of lighting, and you must use the lamposts. Downtown there are the electric are lights on the shepherd's crook poles which were put in to take the place of the old-fashioned gas lamps. The peculiar condition of each class of lighting has to be met, and you can't employ a uniform sign. The system of night signs must be illuminated. House signs will no do, except in the narrower streets downtown, where there is little or no traffic after the evening hours.

"I am for the best street sign system that the city can possibly get, no matter what the cost may be, so long as it will prove adequate to the necessities of sittless. The element of cost should not be considered if what is finally decided upon will be permanent. I think the one must to go after to accomplish the best results is the Comptroller. He is the city's financial officer. All appropriations will come through him, and he should be got on the right side the question. If the money to be expended is spent properly and judicians, it will not have to be spent

The blow fell in Harlem Court to-day, when Magistrate Pool held Binquitz in $500 bail for trial on the charge of annoying Miss Webster, who lives at No. 207 West One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street. He had no bondsman and was sent to the Tombs. Miss Webster is twenty-five years old, a brunette, wears glasses and teaches a class at Calvary M. E. Church, Sev enth avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street. She told the Magistrate that she met Binquintz in August, 1900, and that he had been pestering her ever since with protestations of affection. He insisted on writing gear, started her seams leaking and her love-letters, which she never answered, and made talk in the block by standing for hours in front of the Webster house looking up at her win- Dec. 28 half a dozen plates on both sides
